Rev. J. K. Hall presented the call of Samuel Davies Memorial church, in Hanover county, to Rev. H. C. Brown, of Abingdon Presbytery, at a salary of $400 per annum. Rev. Mr. Turnbull moved that when the presbytery adjourns it adjourns to meet the last Tuesday in May next in Richmond, and to secure Mr. May next in Richmond, and to secure Mr.
Brown in case the call should be accepted by him. The motion prevailed. A memorial was read by Rev. W. A. Campbell from three ministers of Chesapeake Presbytery—namely, Messrs. Rice, Bibzer and Pitzer, asking the concurrence of the presbytery in a proposal for the transfer of Fredericksburg church from East Hanover to Chesapeake Presbytery. The memorial was referred to a committee

A communication was received from York-River church asking that Rev. W. A. Campbell, of Richmond, be continued as stated supply for that church until the next session of East Hanover Presbytery. So ordered.

The hour for the order of the day having arrived, Rev. H. C. Moore was examined by the moderator for admission into the presbytery. Mr. Moore was examined on experimental religion by the moderator, and on systematic theology by Rev. W. T. Richardson, D. D., of Rich-mond. Rev. Dr. Armstrong, of Norfolk, examined Mr. Moore on church govern-ment. The presbytery sustained the ex-amination on the whole, and Mr. Moore's rame, was ordered to be correlated as name was ordered to be enrolled as a member of East Hanover Presbytecy. Rev. James I. Vance, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in Norfolk, offered the following resolution, which was unani-

HONORING BEAUREGARD

ANNIVERSARY OF THE BOMBARD. MENT OF FORT SUMTER,

In Which the Great Soldier So Herolcally Figured, Celebrated in an Appropriate Manner by Ex-Confederates.

CHARLESTON, S. C., April 12.-The thirty-second anniversary of the bombardment of Fort Sumter by South Carolina volunteers and its surrender by Major Robert Anderson, commanding the United States troops, was celebrated by thousands of Charlestonians, veterans from neighboring parishes and several representatives of other States. It was not an exultant commemoration of victory, but a memorial tribute of the people to the men who had come to their aid when their needs were sorest. Heretofore the anniversary of the sur-Heretofore the anniversary of the sur-render of Fort Sumter has not been observed in Charleston except by the annual meeting of the Confederate sur-vivors of this county, who read a few memorials in honor of their members deceased during the preceding year, passed ordinary resolutions of regret, talked their battles over for two hours, and perhaps, in view of their depleted ranks, drank a toast to those that would ranks, drank a toast to those that would pass away before another meeting.

To-day the Confederate survivors of Charleston held their second meeting since the war, the first being memorial services to Jefferson Davis, To-day the wives and sisters, children and grandchildren of Confederate soldiers took their places in the procession to the Grand Opera House, following the Confederate Veterans, bearing the sword of Beauregard, and crowded that edific its utmost capacity, hundreds failing to obtain admittance. It was a scene and occasion that will not soon be forgotten. There was not a suggestion of regret over the failure of the Confederacy; not a breath of disloyalty to the flag against which they fought, and which floated over their heads as they spoke to-day. but a tribute to General Beauregard. whose death they had assembled to de-

They made no apologies for his course or that of their dead comrades in what they still believe to be the greatest struggle in the world's history for constitu-

As soon as the announcement Beauregard's death was received it was determined to make this ordinary, uneventful and unobserved anniversary of the attack on Fort Sumter, in which he played a most conspicuous part, the oc-casion of memorial services to his memory. This was the intention of the Confederate survivors, but when the will of the great soldier and engineer was opened, and it was found that he had left his sword to the city of Charleston, the enthusiasm of the people knew no bounds. The scope of the celebration was enlarged, and the result was the outpouring of the people to-day.

The city council sent a committee of distinguished citizens to New Orleans two weeks ago to receive the sword of Beauregard. They returned and delivered the sword into the custody of the city with appropriate ceremonies. To-day the sword was brought from its place in the city hall to the memorial meeting at the Grand Opera-House by ex-Mayor Courteny, General T. A. Huguenin last commander of Fort Sumpter, Major John Johnson, 'engineer and historian of the siege, and Major C. S. Gadsden, who composed the committee which brought the sword from New Orleans.

The guard of honor to this committee consisted of the city council, veterans of the Confederacy in this city and color guards of every white military organiza-tion in Charleston, with their flars draped and preceded by a band playing martial

As the procession entered the alreadycrowded opera house, General Huguenia, bearing Beauregard's sword, the enthusiasm rose to the highest Intensity; men, women and children rose to their feet and cheered; sober men grew wild, and probably Charleston testified as she never will again in human emotion her rever-ence for the past and her love and ad-miration for her defender. The flags borne by the color guards were the comcanv colors, the Stars at the company flag of the Marion artillery, which is claimed to have been the first flag fired at by the United States troops during the war. The opera-house had been elaborately draped from pit to dome with flags of all nations, and the stage was at once on armory and a garden, consisting of stacks of arms and flass, palmetto trees, banks of roses and festoons of moss and ivy. Attached to the flags above the stage, and arranged so as to fall away in regular tiers before the audience, were broad bands of white cloth, each being inscribed with the name of the famous regiments of which Beauregard was leader. "Fort Sumter." "Ma-nassas." "Shiloh" and "Petersburg" in the order formed the subject of special address during the day. At the corners of the stage were placed two famous bullet-holed, ragged and torn battle-flags ed by the Sumter Courds and on the right that owned by the Washington Light Infantry.

whose judgment is always asked, pro-nounced the samples of Mr. Bowers bet-ter than that of his higher and successnounced the samples of Mr. Bowers better than that of his higher and successful competitor; yet in spite of that the committee gave away $1,200 of the city's money. In the award for the metallic files and shelves the hid of Mr. H. M. Starke was $800 less than that of Mr. Everett Waddey, and although the City Engineer stated to the committee "that there was no appreciable difference between the two manufactures." yet the committee again decided to let $900 more of the city's money go. A total amount of $2,100. The public is certainly entitled to an explanation. In both cases the City Engineer seems to be of the opinion that the city would have been as well if not better off, had the several contracts been awarded to the lowest bidders.
